The exposome is the globality of the factors the human body is exposed to, from conception onwards. It complements the genome.

For this highly complex interaction, the term exposome was coined by Dr. Christopher Wild at the International Agency for Research on Cancer, World Health Organization.

The skin exposome comprises several external and internal factors including UV radiation, climatic conditions (heat and humidity), medications, pollution, stress, and dermatology procedures that may damage the skin barrier, induce skin diseases or accelerate skin ageing.

Are you involved in skin exposome research?

What if you competed for the 5th edition of the Vichy Exposome Grant?

This year, instead of one international grant, 3 regional research grants of €15,000 each are awarded to research projects in the field of exposome and skin.

Each grant will be awarded to one project originating from one of the following regions:

- Asia & Oceania
- Europe & North America
- Latin America, Africa & Middle East

The awardee will be announced during the 2021 AAD Annual Meeting in San Francisco in March 2021.

Meet the jury

The applications for the Vichy Exposome Grant will be reviewed by an independent jury of experts chaired by Professor Jean Krutmann (Germany) and composed of Professors Craig Elmetts (USA), Haidong Kan (China), Thierry Passeron (France), Sergio Schalka (Brazil).
